

AdvocateDaily.com

CANADA'S LEGAL NEWSWIRE

Accounting for Law
Financial Peace of Mind for Lawyers

Need help with bookkeeping?

Start Now

Personal Injury

Jasmine Daya's media roundup

By AdvocateDaily.com Staff

Toronto personal injury lawyer Jasmine Daya is frequently called upon by the media as a trusted source for their news stories, particularly for her focus on personal injury cases involving cannabis, motor vehicle accidents and nightclub assaults.

In her recent column for Huffington Post, Toronto personal injury lawyer Jasmine Daya says the Liberal government will gain popularity for cannabis legalization, but there is a failure to acknowledge the barrage of civil litigation that will undoubtedly happen in the years to come — not to mention the cost of such suits, which will ultimately trickle-down to taxpayers.

Even auto insurance companies that have allegedly withheld hundreds of millions of dollars in HST payments from Ontario car accident victims since 2010 have been named in 11 class action lawsuits that now total $1.1 billion in damages, Toronto personal injury lawyer Jasmine Daya tells The Lawyer's Daily.

Toronto personal injury lawyer Jasmine Daya tells The Lawyer's Daily Ontario's auto insurance system is "undoubtedly broken" and that the province essentially doesn't have a proper tort law for accident victims due to auto insurance deductibles and thresholds.

President Trump's conduct fits the profile of cyberbullying and the individuals that he has personally attacked have a cause of action against him if his conduct has caused them harm, says Toronto personal injury lawyer Jasmine Daya in her recent column for The Lawyer's Daily.

Just because cannabis is now legal doesn't mean consumption in all circumstances is safe, Toronto personal injury lawyer Jasmine Daya tells The Lawyer's Daily.

In her recent column for The Lawyer's Daily, Toronto personal injury lawyer Jasmine Daya says the availability of guns coupled with random shootings in our neighbourhoods has undermined the safety and security of Torontonians.

changes to Ontario's Insurance Act and the defensible approach policy insurance companies have adopted are driving up the cost of litigation and making it more difficult for plaintiffs to recover general damages from motor vehicle accidents, Toronto personal injury lawyer Jasmine Daya tells Law Times.

Toronto personal injury lawyer Jasmine Daya tells Law Times that litigation funding helps level the playing field for accident victims who are facing rising disbursement rates and insurance companies that play hardball in settlement negotiations.

To Read More Jasmine Daya Posts Click Here